How to Draw Phoebe and Friends

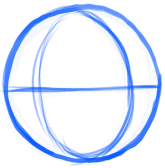
After learning how to draw Phoebe and friends, try drawing your own characters and their stories with Dana Simpson's cartooning guide, found on AMPKids.com

HOW TO DRAW PHOEBE

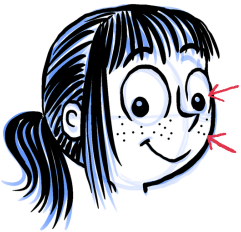
Phoebe's head is very round.

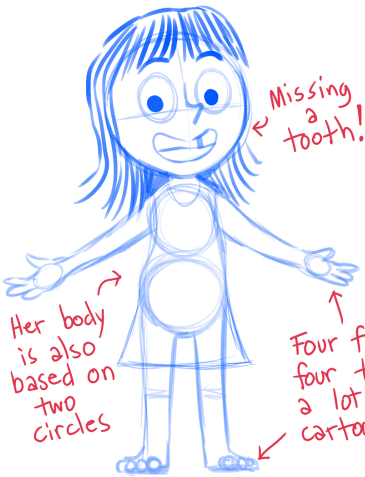


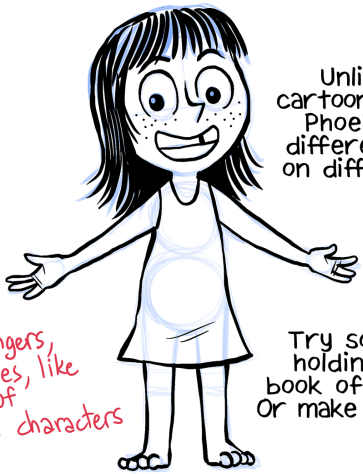
She has oval eyes and a little point for a nose.

Her hair has a lot of lines in it.

She usually, but not always, wears a ponytail.







Unlike some cartoon characters, Phoebe wears different outfits on different days.

Try some! You're holding a whole book of references. Or make up your own!

HOW TO DRAW Marigold

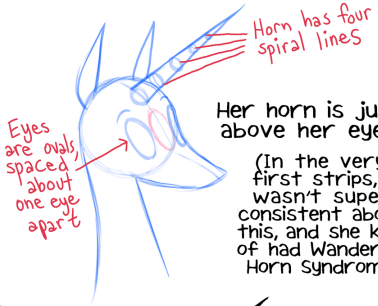
Marigold's head has a circle at the center of it.

Before I draw her unicorny features, she kind of looks like a dinosaur.



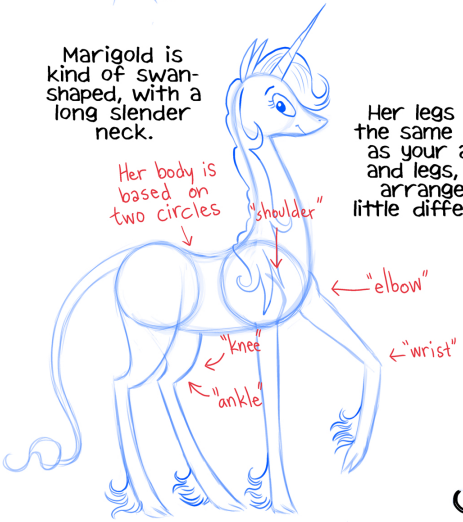
Her horn is just above her eyes.

(In the very first strips, I wasn't super consistent about this, and she kind of had Wandering Horn Syndrome.)

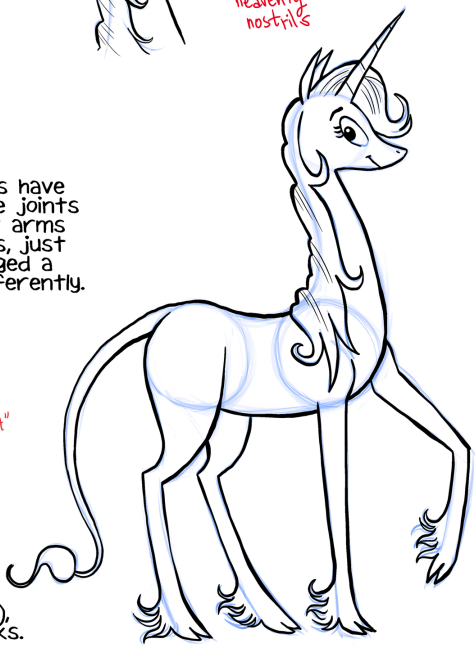
The front part of her mane is basically a swoop, and is on the far side of her head and horn no matter which way she's facing.

(It's magic.)

Marigold is kind of swan-shaped, with a long slender neck.



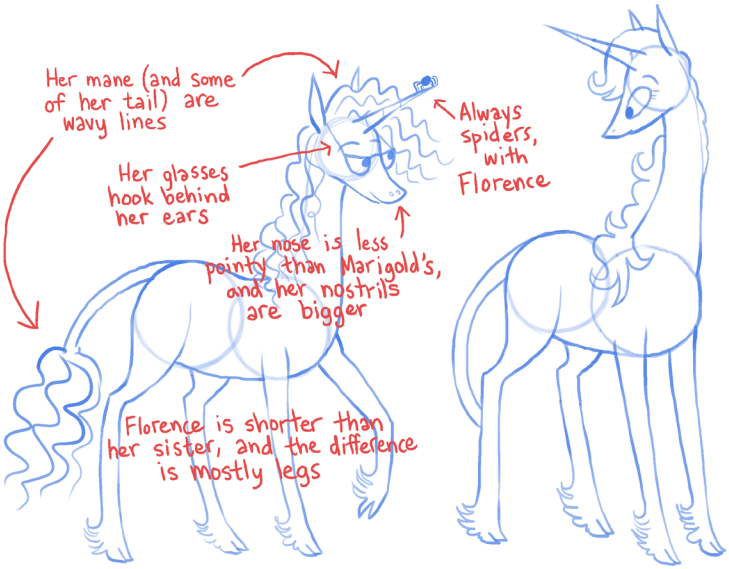
Her legs have the same joints as your arms and legs, just arranged a little differently.



Her hooves are cloven (two-pointed), like a deer's. Also she has fluffy fetlocks.

Florence Unfortunate Nostrils

Florence looks a lot like her sister Marigold Heavenly Nostrils in some ways, but there are also some big differences.



You and YOUR Unicorn!

Now draw yourself with you very own unicorn BFF! Remember, every unicorn is just as unique as their human, so get creative!

Dakota and Her... Goblins?

Phoebe's frenemy Dakota likes to point out their differences too, but they also have a lot in common! They both love to perform and seem to have a knack for making magical friends.

Like Phoebe's, Dakota's head is based on a circle.

Your typical goblin

Queen Prunella Von Blaart

Goblins come in different heights, shapes, spot patterns...they probably vary as much as humans.

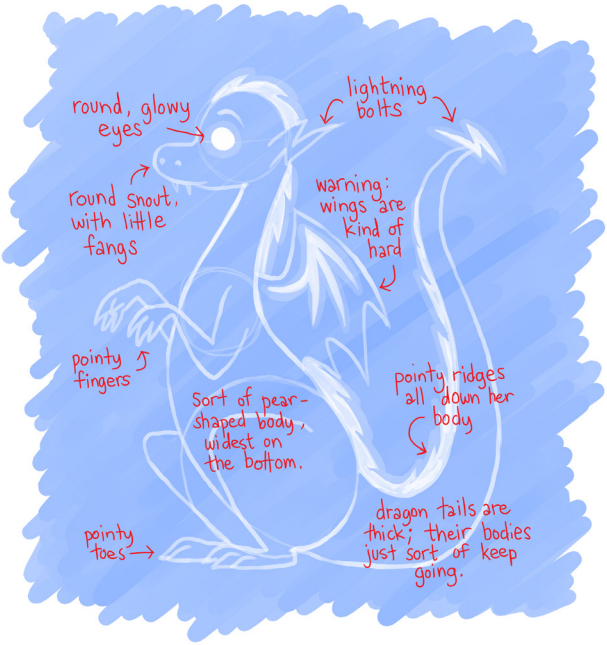
Max and the Dragons

Max is Phoebe's best friend, and a total computer nerd. He and the dragon Voltina bonded over their mutual love of electricity.

Max's face is more of an oval.

Voltina

Voltina is made of electricity, which makes her a little harder to draw. You could try using a white colored pencil on black paper, or chalk on a sidewalk. Or you could draw her in pencil and just pretend!



Todd is living proof that there's no wrong way to be a dragon! If you had a dragon friend, would they breathe fire, candy, or something else entirely?

Todd the Candy-Breathing Dragon

Sue and Ringo the Lake Monster

Phoebe met Sue at music camp, along with Sue's pal, Ringo the Lake Monster. They only get to see each other once per year, but that just makes their time together all the more magical!
